

Adventure in Peru
Copicmarker mit Aquarellfarben auf Papier
2019
21 x 14.8 cm

Textausschnitt, Lichtung

It wasn't for another hour until they saw some light shimmering through the trees. It seemed a little weird to them since the high treetops in the rainforest barely let through any sunlight, and yet they were instantly attracted to it. As they got closer, the sun shone brighter, brushing the leaves with its light, welcoming them with every step as they got closer. Enchanted, they walked up to the edge of the woodland, where they abruptly stopped and shouted out in horror.

There was nothing there. The ground looked as if it had been peeled away from an unspeakable force taking all the life with it. The trees and all the animals that had been there had been cut down and burnt to nothing.

